THE CRISIS AT OTTAWA.
NO FURTHER CONCESSIONS TO BE MADE TO THE FRENCH MINISTERS.

The latter holding a Caucus—If they do not yield the Government may resign.
OTTAWA, July 10.—There is no more appearance to-day of any settlement of the trouble between the French Conservative members and the Government than there was last night.

It is reported this morning that Premier Dufferin and his colleagues have decided not to make any further concessions to the demand of the French ministers.

A caucus of the latter is now being held and it is likely that when the House meets this afternoon they will make a statement and at the same time resign their portfolios.

THE LATEST.
A Statement to be Made To-morrow.

OTTAWA, July 10.—When the House met to-day, Mr. Laurier asked Mr. Foster for a statement about the reported resignation of the French Ministers. Mr. Foster said he would make a definite and positive one to-morrow.

MODERATION TRIUMPHS.

BEHAVIOUR, FRIDAY, JULY 12.

EDITORIAL PRIVILEGES.

Will the Free Trade reduce Taxation?
Did the Grit tariff 1874 make you rich?
Did the Grit tariff make the country rich?
Did the people want it re-enacted?

PROTECTION AND THE FARMER.

In the protection of the farmer Sir Richard Cartwright remarked rightly enough that the prosperity of Canada, which is chiefly an agricultural country, depends largely on the prices of food products, meats and cereals, and he added that "there will be no competition in the market which we have no control of." The view thus expressed is in accord with the principles of the free trade school, and is totally dissimilar from the view of the protectionist school.

The serious remark which is paid in the pages of Quebec to the Manitoba school question has been evidenced in such a manner within the last few days, as to create astonishment in some quarters. The French Manitoba colony in the province, sought to prove the necessity of a school for the children of the present session of Parliament, the Premier and the other of his colleagues, decided upon the middle course of a compromise school, which is a school in which the French and English children are educated together. The result has been, after a few days of great excitement, that moderation has carried the day. Mr. Angers, Minister of Agriculture, who was also minister of the Government, has declared, but it will not be difficult to find a successor to him. Sir, Mr. Angers, Mr. O'Connell has justified their party's confidence in their loyalty and patriotism, and their conduct under such trying circumstances, will add to the high regard in which they have always been held. Sir Mackenzie Bowden's course during the crisis has been such as to have no control of the view thus expressed is in accord with the principles of the free trade school, and is totally dissimilar from the view of the protectionist school.

THEIR PERILOUS VOYAGE.

That Venture some Bermuda Family Arrived at Quarantine.

A full, sunny afternoon at Quarantine, New York, on Tuesday was suddenly interrupted by the appearance of a small boat in the bay. The boat was the Rosita, a small schooner of 20 feet long, which had been blown off the coast of Bermuda.

The steamer Delaware, on July 10, at 10:30, left New York for Bermuda. The Rosita, which was a small schooner of 20 feet long, was blown off the coast of Bermuda. Queen Victoria's Menus.

Queen Victoria is rather simple in her tastes, as a rule. For instance, a kind of natural soup very often finds its way on the menu. The same with the white sherry, which Her Majesty generally drinks from a beautiful gold cup. Belonging to Queen Victoria's menus are the following:—

CLEAN TORY SWEET.

A Poor Outlook for the Imperial Liberals.

SIR WILLIAM HARCOURT DEFEATED

The First Day's Nominations and Polls show a Slight Lead for the Conservatives.

Only One Candidate in the Polls.

London, July 13.—The Liberals are in a very deplorable mood. All Saturday long, and far into the night, the returns were coming in, and at the close of the day they were not the slightest hope for the party holding its own in the elections. This was not unexpected. The party had been defeated in the polls in the belief that they would be defeated, but they did not expect the result to be so complete. The party had been defeated in the polls in the belief that they would be defeated, but they did not expect the result to be so complete. The party had been defeated in the polls in the belief that they would be defeated, but they did not expect the result to be so complete.

As it stands the direction of the wind, the result upon Sir William and Lady Vernon Harcourt and Sir Thomas Buxton, after a political meeting in the evening, showed that the feelings of the electors, or at least a large proportion of them, were entirely in favor of the Conservatives. The Liberal vote was small, and the Conservative vote was large. The Liberal vote was small, and the Conservative vote was large. The Liberal vote was small, and the Conservative vote was large.

From many other directions the returns show a great falling off in the Liberal vote. The Liberal vote was small, and the Conservative vote was large. The Liberal vote was small, and the Conservative vote was large. The Liberal vote was small, and the Conservative vote was large.

Behind the Doors

By J. H. Thompson.

(Copyright, 1895, by J. H. Thompson.)

"Don't be brooding over the air."

"I can't help myself, but I'm brooding over the air."

"You need only drink it in by the air."

"I really do not know," answered

Stewart, "but I should say not."

"I never tried it. Besides if the bolt was forced back I don't see how the door could be locked again from the inside."

"I am aware that each one of us who was in the house that night stands in a somewhat awkward position."

"I consider it quite providential that, under the circumstances, I should have been a close prisoner that night."

"There was some slight applause in the corner when Stewart uttered the corner."

A solicitor representing the treasury of the night house, and the corner, and addressing the corner and jury said:

"We grant it would be impossible that the witness who now stands before you could lock himself into his bedroom."

"I am not instructed, I may say, to insinuate any charge against the witness, who seems to have given his evidence in a very fair and proper manner, but we are all of us naturally eager to clear up every point."

"I say it with all due deference, sir," addressing himself directly to the corner who bowed and then turned himself in a short, snappy series of yawns—"concerned with this terrible tragedy, now, I would wish to direct the jury's attention to the fact that, though it would be impossible for either of the lodgers in the house—the two gentlemen, Messrs. Stewart and Vickery—to lock themselves into their own rooms, it would be impossible for either or both of them to be locked in by some third person."

"I beg your pardon, sir," interrupted the corner, "but your remarks are quite irregular. Have you any questions to ask the witness?"

"Excuse me, sir," said the solicitor, bowing and turning his eyes upon Stewart.

"You say that during the night you heard nothing—no sounds or footsteps or voices of any unusual kind?"

"No, nothing."

"Would it have been possible for you to have left yourself out of your bedroom window and to have let yourself back again?"

"I do not know. I should think it would be impossible."

A WONDERFUL CURE. Mr. David Smith of Hill, Ont., writes: "For the benefit of those who are afflicted with the disease of Stomach and Liver, I have discovered a cure."

Wall Paper

THE designs of our spring wall papers are beautiful and the colorings exquisite. The effects they produce upon the wall have been studied with intelligent sympathy and the "long-felt wants" of a few years ago have been provided for with cultivated taste.

A judicious employment of any of our papers leaves a tile to be done in a room. A few ornaments, according to the taste or wealth of the occupant, are all that is necessary to contribute to its beauty and comfort. Our papers thoroughly represent the standard of the prevailing taste in Interior Decorations.

John Finnegan & Son,

CARRIAGE BUILDERS.

There is a marble bust of Longfellow in Westminster Abbey.

DEAR SIR, I have used Dr. Fowler's

Scallop Brand Compound for many years, and have found it to be the best remedy for the cure of Stomach and Liver.

"I have been afflicted with the disease of Stomach and Liver for many years, and have tried every remedy known to me, but have not been able to get any relief."

REV. DR. TALMAGE ON WRONGS THAT CANNOT BE RIGHTED.

His Opinion of "the Unpardonable Sin"— Not Possible To-day to Commit It—Some Irrevocable Mistakes Enumerated—The Signal Gun of the Gospel.

New York, July 14.—In his sermon for today, Rev. Dr. Talmage, who is still in the west on his annual summer tour, chose a subject which has been a fruitful theme of theological disputation for centuries past—viz., "The Unpardonable Sin." The texts selected were: "All manner of sin and blasphemy shall be forgiven unto men; but whosoever shall blaspheme against the holy Ghost shall never speak a word against the son of Man. It shall be forgiven him, and whatsoever he speaketh against the holy Ghost it shall not be forgiven him, neither in this world, neither in the world to come."—Matthew xii, 31, 32.

"He found no place of repentance, though he sought it carefully with tears."—Hebrews xli, 17.

As sometimes you gather the whole family around the evening stand to read some book read, so now we gather a great Christian group—to study the text, and now may one and the same lamp cast its glow on all the cir-

[illegible][illegible][illegible][illegible]

and then repents of it in after life, the Lord may pardon him, but that does not bring back good physical condition. I said to a minister of the gospel on Sabbath, at the close of the service, "Where are you preaching now?" "Oh," he says, "I am not preaching. I am suffering from the physical effects of early sin. I can't preach now; I am sick." A consecrated man he now is, and he moans bitterly over early sins, but that does not arrest their bodily effects.

The same fact is, that men and women often take 20 years of their life to build up influences that require all the rest of their life to break down. Talk about a man beginning his life at 20, and a woman at 25. Ah, no! At what a woman beginning life when she is 18 years of age! Ah, no! In many respects that is the time they close life. The stars out of ten all the questions of eternity are decided in the first 20 years of the life of men getting their fortunes between 20 and 40; they get or lose fortunes between 10 and 20. When you tell me that a man is just beginning life, I tell you he is just losing it. The next 50 years will not be of as much importance to him as the

Now, why do I say this? Is it for the annoyance of those who have only baleful retrospection? You know is not my way. I say it for the benefit of young men and women. I want them to understand that eternity I rapped up in this hour; that the sin—worth no more rest over; that you youth we never get over; that you grow up great future is to run; that you are, instead of being 60 a-criminal, you are 60 a-criminal, a nice dignity and importance gives to the life of all our young people. It is not something to be frittled away, not something to be smirked at, not something to be laughed at, but something to be weighed in the balances of eternity. Oh, young people, you are going to live, you will reach over 10,000 years, beyond the great and unending eternity. You are going to live, you are very sorry. Now I have to be 60 years of age, and I do with me. I am 60 years of age, and I do that that amount to 10 God may do you, but undo those things you will undo those things you will undo those things you will undo this same category of irrevocable makes I put all parental neglect. We are going to be 60 years of age, and by the time they get to be 10 or 15 we wake up to our mistakes and try to make up for them. But it is too late, but it is too late. The parent who is, in the first ten years of the life of the child, the parent who is the Christ, never makes it. The to, but after awhile one more than the rest struck his heels and down, hundreds and thousands of feet, the rest went.

So I see whole families bound together, and the mother in many walking on slippery places of illness and sin. The father knows the mother moves it, and the bound child is the one who begin to slide down steeper and and, and the father becomes alarming. The mother says, "I am of Age," "He stops, but the breaks, and those who were once fast to him by moral and spiritual ties are broken. The mother is such a thing as coming to soon enough to save miraculously. The mother is the one many parents wake up in the part of life to find out the mistake. The parent says, "I have been too late. I have been too late to discipline of my children. If I had little ones around me again, how could I do so?" You will never get them around you again, and the bent to the character is given, sailed into the Arctic in the time of a war and it was found that the ship had been in the Arctic for 100 years ice, but 300 went to the bottom. During those hours of calamity, Stewart Holland was in the Arctic. It sounded across the sea, boom! Instant! The heimsman forsook his place,

He is a perfectly little creature, even if he does not weigh but two and one-half pounds, and he makes a cunning picture as he lies on his bed in the incubator with his eyes closed and his flaps doubled up. His meals come every hour, and then he is given one ounce of nourishment, all of which he retains on his stomach and seemingly enjoys. When he is fed his pulse beat and temperature are taken and the result Observation marked upon a movable chart, which may afford an interesting study for his old age, if he survives to the time when he is 100.

The house in which we Charia live is a queer-looking affair, and an unimpressive one. It is a small building, the hospital where the insulator stands might be excused for mistaking it for a garage. The house appears to be reduced to scales of the children's play made of nickel, copper and tin, and pretty much resembles the machines of the fair. The little bed on which the baby lies is placed almost in the middle of the room, and is surrounded on scales, a thermometer is balanced on the wall, and a clock is placed besides the child so that the tempo of the air may be known at any time, with the least possible delay. As an even degree of warmth is preserved by water heated by gas, in the bottom of the room, which forms the main part of the incubator, the heat comes in constantly from a pipe which extends about three feet above the trapline, and they all took to the water. They hung by their tails to the highest branches of the trees. The keepers, who got all the nets and traps set, then sat down and endeavored to capture them.

One little fellow hung from a bough of a tree, and he was so fat and so plump that he could not get up to get him the limb broke and both fell into the water. The monkey was so fat that he could not swim, and he was carried away by the tide. A man on a rowboat caught him as he was floating, and he was taken to the keepers.

Then the keepers fired Roman candles at the tree, but this did not dislodge him. They then cut the limb off, and he went up into the lion's cage. The lion started at him, but the monkey got up and showed him his tail, and he was captured and be captured. Another was found hanging from the trunk of a tree, and the skull of an elephant in the museum.

The keepers put bananas in the cage, and the monkey came out and ate them. One returned and was caught, and the keepers put him in the cage. Thereupon he passed out all the bananas, and the keepers were very angry. He was then put in the cage, and the keepers fed him the delicacies of the season. This was done for a week, and the monkey was very fat and plump.

One day more than the monkeys in the tree could stand. Rattling with fat, he came out of the cage, and he was very fat and plump.

APPETIZING CHERRIES.

Simple Modes of Preparing One of the Best Summer Fruits.

The cherry, in its varied hues of rich blue, red and white, is a delightful illustration of the perfection of summer, a sign of one of our most delicious early fruits. While cherries are much liked in their raw state, aside from the traditional cherry pie, the value of the fruit in relieving other dietary defects is not as well understood by housewives as it should be.

CHERRY PUDDING.
A delicious cherry pudding is made of the following ingredients: Boil one pint of water. Beat the yolks of four eggs until light, then the whites, and add with stirring one cup of sugar. Add one cup of flour with two teaspoonfuls of baking powder. Stir in one cup of milk and one of two teaspoonfuls of melted butter in a pinch of salt. Drain the juice from one quart of cherries, and mix it with the flour and stir with the eggs, turn into a buttered pudding dish, and bake in a water bath for boiling water for three hours. Serve with cream.

CHERRY SPONGE.
To make cherry sponge cover half a pound of gelatine with cold water and let it stand until dissolved. Boil one pint of boiling water, add two teaspoonfuls of sugar and one of salt dissolved in water. Beat the whites of four eggs in a tin or, not on ice, and strain into the mixture. Turn into a mold and stir thick. When set, cut into slices and serve with white cream. To make cherry cake, beat the whites of four eggs, mix until frothy, turn into a fancy mold and add one cup of sugar. Bake in a water bath in the mold, place on a flat glass plate and garnish with whipped cream and cherries. This is a fine dish for luncheon or lawn parties.

CHERRY LUNCHEON.
To make a very ornamental as well as a palatable dish for the summer tea table, take one quart of cherries, wash and remove the stones, and mix with half a pint of cold water and let it boil for half an hour. Pour the juice into a glass and strain the pulp into a strainer. Strain the gelatine in a pan of water and add one cup of sugar. Beat. Whip a pint of cream, add the gelatine to the cherry pulp and juice, and mix thoroughly. Turn into a mold until cold, add the whipped cream, and garnish with whipped cream and cherries.

CHERRY CHARLOTTE.
To make a fine and elegant finger or a slice of salad sponge cake. Whip a pint of very rich sweet cream, and add one cup of sugar. Beat the whites of three egg whites and add one or two tablespoonfuls of red cherry juice. Turn into a mold and bake in a water bath of cold, piping it high, des-

CRUQUANT OF CHERRIES

This is more troublesome than a plain charlotte russe, but for special occasions is a handsome dish for the dinner table. The most perfectly shaped cherries of a bright red should be selected. Cover a tablespoonful of gelatin with cold water, let work half an hour, and add two tablespoonfuls of boiling water, stir until dissolved. Dip a two-quart mold in ice water, and stand in a pan of cracked ice. Dip ea-cherry in the vatline and press them against the sides of the mold when they should stick. They may be removed in clusters or with a knife to cover the bottom or sides of the mold. Fill the center with rich cream mixed in chocolate and a handful of nuts. When ready to serve, take carefully from the mold, and place on a glass dish.

CHERRY RICE.

For warm weather, nothing is more refreshing than cherry rice. To make it stone and mash three pints of morello cherries. Make a syrup of a pound of sugar and a pint of water, and water boiled together. Let cool, strain the cherry juice into it, turn into a freezer and freeze.

FRUIT MANNA.

Another delicious summer dessert. Start variety of the fruit may be used but should be perfectly ripe, well sweetened, then mixed with ice water and frozen.

CHERRY SOUFFLÉ
 Want to make and very tempting for luncheon or dinner. Cover half a box of gelatine with a little cold water for ten minutes. Boil one hour; add half cup of boiling water. Add one cup of sugar. Mix a pint of red cherry juice with a round of meat together until syrup is formed. Heat the yolk of six eggs until light. Whip a quart of cream, mix the syrup, mix the gelatine together in a tin pan, strain the gelatine into it, and stir until the mixture begins to thicken. Turn the mixture quickly turn into an ice cream mold, and salt and ice, and let stand for two hours.

WANTED TO CHANGE THE STYLE.
 He Thought He Would but the Text was Too Good To Leave

"There isn't any sense in it." How many times have you heard that? Van Rensselaer Hibben suddenly said that to the wicker chair with the cracked and distorted legs, the summer porch, which was having a good time all the while.

"In what—your head?" he pertly asked the girl in the pink shirt waist who spring, Howell took off his coat and shirt, and sat down again in the wicker chair.

[illegible]

His auditors sat both upright. "To wouldn't dare go on the street like that," said one.

"Wouldn't I?" Howell said with bravado of the newly emancipated. "You go on the streets in shirt sleeves, don't you? I look all right. I wouldn't be afraid to go anywhere like this." He appeared, for my good sense, not to be at all aware of the fact that he did not.

"That comes that girl who is visiting the Browns" the languid "She's turning out."

But the rest was lost in the same manner, as the advocate of the new style, as he grabbed his coat and shirt, and went out, leaving the audience in a panic which supplanted the occupant of the hammock.

"I don't see so consistent," Chicago Daily News.

couldn't tell you apart," she said, and Saxe was undecided whether to be charmed with the comparison or otherwise.

But he seemed to go just so far and no further. Kitty could not understand him. She felt that she had begun to fear it was becoming a sort of platonic friendship, and that was a thing she could not stand. She had been strong-minded and unattractive women could indulge in them. As the time of the year drew on, she felt that she strained every nerve—without apparent anxiety, however—to make Saxs countenance mellow. He would not, and she was made to feel that he was not her conception of human motives that one man should be so loyal to another. She had been told that her friend's promised wife, she feared that she was losing his allegiance, and in her mind she was sure that she was. She began making love to Sax when Sax would not make love to her. Under ordinary circumstances she would have been satisfied with what she was past seeing any fault in the girl whom he had cherished so severely once. It was not that she was not sure that he loved her, but she did not let him guess this from her manner.

Arms' up in love, Kitty, I asked, "Did you never call her by that name?"

"Another uncertain 'Yes.'"
"Besides I can't see that you are under any restraint."
"You don't know."
"It seems to me that Appleton gives you a great deal of freedom."
"Oh, he tells me I may do as I like; he means to be generous, but—I don't know how far, or in what instances. I told him I wanted to walk back from the hospital you. You hadn't asked me, but meant to ask you. He looked hurt, and said something about his having just come home. He gave me permission, however, of course."
"Then may I take you back?" She was beside himself.

"No."
"Why not?"
"Because."
"I fancy I understand; you don't want to hurt him."
"Yes."
"But if he didn't know?"
"How could it be helped?"
"I'm officer of the day to-night." Then he stomped himself.
"Well!"
"That's all."
"What had that to do with the matter?"

"It hit me," Kitty raised her dark-blue eyes to his with more in their passionate look than a hundred words could have said.

"I've made my determination and I'm stuck on, 'May I meet you in England,' then, after I've visited Edward?" Kitty nodded and hung her head. "But...but...it's so important." "If we are to do this you must tell everything with him and marry him, will you?" A long pause; Kitty seemed to be thinking.

The waits were nearly ended; now, the last notes were wailing away—if she would put off the answer for a moment!

"Will you?" insisted Saxe. Another Appleton looked at her from toward them; he did not like the looks things. "Kitty, will you?" repeated

[illegible]

"By her window; then, as his glance fell, he seemed to see the mud-flecked trousers and the torn shirt of the man in the doorway, and he turned toward it, fussy, she whispered.

A pause. "Yes," was answered, else a whistle, and he came to her and took her in his arms and she was silent.

"He's uncertain to speak," he whispered again. "I thought Kitty would come after all."

"But I did."

"Yes," Kitty, with her head raising like a bird, waited for him to ask his answer, and he said, "Kitty, I was awkward. She could not be here—if. You look enough like Fred and I can't, I think, be his brother."

"Yes?"

"If your voice were not so unlike his, I should have thought it was he."

"Really?"

"Good gracious! Can't you say any more than 'yes' and 'no' and 'possibly'?"

"What is there to say?"

"You might like me at least, I think."

"Small!"

"Yes?"

"What a question," and she turned her face to him.

"And now I must go, Kitty, dear, oh, how I must go, and I shall be badly dressed. Draw back, 'What is the m.j."

A PHANTOM LOVE.

He was a maker of musical instruments, and his eyes twinkled as he looked around at this friends who had been relating queer experiences of their own or their acquaintances. Then he began this remarkable story of a man who was decoyed into chasing a phantom sweetheart from this city to Europe, and over a large part of the land on the other side of the water, only to learn that the whole thing was practical joke, planned to secure re-

"It was in a fashionable boarding house," said the instrument man, "in a downtown street, that four young ladies lived. With youth they combined good looks, cheerful dispositions and the woman's proverbial proneness for desire for the admiration of the warmer sex. But all their blandishments were lost on a handsome young fellow who boarded in the house, and so, while not exactly a cynic or a to fulfill it. Then ensued an anxious search for the letter. The priest, Pruike and Ilmichev, and it tickled the girls immensely to note his flush of embarrassment. The letter was in a small table he would find the daintiest notes from his supposed fair innamorata. The letter was indeed there, and they were too sacred for that; he gently put them in his pocket, waiting till the girls had gone to their rooms, before breaking open the envelope.

The young fellow was becoming impatient. He had been told to take him to be at Trinity church the next morning, and to wear a large red cross on his breast. He was a hand, and so were the four conspirators. He would have it, a young man, that he was a saint. He had been told, the church, placed in a carriage by her hand, and was driven away by the priest, Pruike and Ilmichev. He had the deepest regret that the writer had not come by the boat and had not been helped by the conspirators. He had, she said, her doctors had ordered him to go to Europe, and was to depart for the next day. He had to carry the letter to the church, and to carry to go without having had the pleasure of meeting him, but after he had written, would make a point of finding him.

But what was their amazement when the letter was received by Hanchen in which the girl told him that if he would follow her to Europe, she was begging him to send him another letter informing him where he could meet her. In the boarding house that he was in, he received a card that in two weeks he must leave for Europe. He was excited and wrote three or four letters. The news, instead of invoking sympathy, spurred the girls on to further action. One had a relative in Hamburg, and she wrote to her. The news, the third had some one in Paris in whom she could confide, while the fourth had a friend whom she could write to. In the next few days letters were written at once, four or five were so abundant to let the friends know at the fifth being sent to "the girl" in London. The girl was to stop in London, and how long; how she would go to Paris and where she could be found, and the same was

All the Parisians on hand to see 'the prince' depart, and he was very happy over what he thought was the secret locked up in his breast.

From letters received from the friend abroad he appeared at the address given in London, only to be told that Miss Willoughby had been there and had looked anxiously each day for a friend whom she expected. Much dejected at his non-arrival, she had departed for Paris earlier than she expected, leaving word that should a young man call for her he should be asked to follow her at once.

"In this way he was sent to the four cities named, and then, losing all trace of his phantom sweetheart, he travelled around on his own account, hoping to find her. But of course he didn't, and

"Now," concluded the old man, "tell me if you don't believe this, I will intrust you to my wife, who was Blanche's

PEDALING MADE EASY.

The Genius of Edison Goes to the Aid of Bicyclists.

It has been stated repeatedly that Thomas A. Edison had invented a electric attachment for propelling bicycles.

"I know how the story started," said to an Associated Press reporter the other day, "and I am sorry, along with any attachment to a bicycle for my own personal use and for pleasure conditions, I have never been able to make it work."

Orange, N. J., about one-sixth of a mile from his laboratory and 80 feet high up on the mountain ridge. So, in order to get to his laboratory, which he went home in the middle of the day, I designed a heavy spring, just large enough to hold the bicycle, which was wound up by power from the bicycle engine, and attached to the bicycle by a chain. I had a bicycle, I wanted this spring to supply most of the energy for the ascent. Of course, there is nothing electric about it, it is purely mechanical contrivance.

Navies of the World Compare

Some interesting statistics have been compiled recently by Secretary Heriot concerning the number and the types of war vessels of the leading navies of the world. The tables show that England had at the present time some 43 battleships, 12 coast defenders, and 18 armoured cruisers, and 10 battleships building. The French navy contains 43 armoured vessels built, and 20 authorized and building.

and Italy—British vessels, Germany and Italy—British vessels, Italy, in addition, many unarmored vessels. The number of war vessels in the service of England, including protected cruisers, ordinary cruisers, gunboats, and torpedo boats, exclusive of torpedo boats, is 120 and some 48 additional ones authorized and building. The French navy contains 114 war vessels, with 24 building, and many has altogether 30, 20, 12, and 11. Italy 72. Torpedo boats have come to be a very important part in naval warfare. France has 217 torpedo boats in service and 42 authorized and building; England 165 and 64 respectively; Italy 178; Germany 106 and 106; and the United States 110 and 100. Between the United States and foreign navies affairs, by the latter, are very significant. At present the United States has 3 torpedo boats and 3 building. Boston Journal of Commerce.

Krasue seems to be an educated, date chronicler and talks plausibly in diction of his peculiar habits. He says his and spiritual achievements are all upon strictly scientific principles. His coffin bed is constructed of rough boards. He says that the custom of lying on soft beds is responsible for the enervation of modern civilization, hard, unyielding couch he declared is conducive to rugged health. As for the part of the programme, Prof. Krasue says it is a daily reminder of the brevity of life as enables him at night to concentrate mind on the most valuable world. If it were to practice, he says, he would go naked. He has a great admiration for Capt. Von Schmidt, who, without cloak, survives wind and rain on the Okhotsk navy and who is one of the most

London, July 30.—With the exception of the polls in three districts, the result of the general election is now known.

The election was to be held from the East Division of England, the North

Division of London, and the North

Division of Scotland. In 1902 East

London was divided into three constituencies by a majority of 100, the South Division of London was divided into two, and the North Division of London was divided into three. The result in these districts will show a difference in the first two mentioned districts, the poll will not be declared until the election in Oxford and Shrewsbury. The result in these

BURNED TO DEATH.

Sad Fate of a Little Child Near Quebec.

(From Our Own Correspondent.)

Muske, July 29.—Mr. Robert Smith, who lives near Quebec, on Sunday, while his wife was at church, sent his youngest son, a boy of five years, to get some milk from the cow in the back yard. The boy, who was alone, was playing with a gun when he accidentally fired it. The ball struck him in the chest and he fell. He was found by his mother when she returned home. He was dead.
